

His 5000, FA 2009, Eastern Illinois, Newton Key

Historiographical Review Papers

1. Carnahan, Tara
 - a. Abolition of the Slave Trade (Quakers and others), 1780-1810
 - i. Dr. Foy
2. Dalton, Andrew S.
 - a. Civil War: the war years/beyond military history, 1861-65 (to be fleshed out)
 - i. Dr. Voss-Hubbard
3. Davis, Bryant C.
 - a. Age of Jackson, 1820s-30s
 - i. Dr. Voss-Hubbard
4. Hodgson, Brandon D.
 - a. Race, Class, and Gender in the War of American Independence, 1775-81
 - i. Dr. Foy
5. Hosin, Chady M.
 - a. Meiji Restoration, 1850-70s
 - i. Dr. Lee
6. Kernc, Christopher R.
 - a. Industry and the West: Beyond the Turner Thesis, 1890-1910s
 - i. Drs. Curry/Titus
7. Lempera, Amanda L.
 - a. Decline of the Ottoman Empire, 1750-1918
 - i. Dr. Yaycioglu
8. Markelz, Ryan M.
 - a. Indian-White relations in North American Middle Ground/Borderlands, before 1800
 - i. Dr. Barnhart
9. Morrisette, Adam C.
 - a. Caribbean colonial world before 1700
 - i. Drs. Foy and Smith
10. Rogers, Staci L.
 - a. Imperial Boston, 1759-1774 (The Boston Massacre and Beyond)
 - i. Dr. Foy
11. Ruiz, Herman R.
 - a. The Sans-culottes Revolution, 1792-1794
 - i. Dr. Smith
12. Wallace, Robert M.
 - a. European Military Revolution, 1560-1800 (dating appears to be part of the debate!)
 - i. Drs. Key/Smith
13. Weatherford, Michael
 - a. American and New Imperialism, 1890-1910 (to be fleshed out)
 - i. Drs. Hardeman/Curry

His 5000, FA 2009, Eastern Illinois, Newton Key

His 5000 Historiographical Review. This paper (12-18 pp., 30%) will be a critical review of the historiography on subject bounded in time and space (those approved listed above). Within this historiography you should find a variety of approaches (for example, a Marxist approach, a gendered approach, an Atlantic world approach, a microhistory, etc.). Your historiographical review should be modeled on those in Historical Journal (available in Booth, JSTOR, etc.), although those in HJ focus on recent books and yours probably will analyze articles and books over the past fifty years or more. You will be advised in preparing a bibliography for this paper both by myself and another professor in the department with the relevant specialty (as well as your own searches in Historical Abstracts, America History and Life, RHS online Bibliography of British and Irish History, Booth stacks, etc.). Essays should be typed, double-spaced, and use Chicago Manual of Style/Turabian form of referencing (see citation guide <http://ux1.eiu.edu/~nekey/citate.htm>).

I suggest that you consult and analyze at least one historiographical review essay on your subject, as well as eight-to-ten key articles (or relevant chapters in books), and four-to-six book reviews. Also, append a further reading list of eight-to-ten additional works which you consulted only briefly, but which you know through reviews, other articles, to be relevant to your argument. This can be revised (more articles, less book reviews; a full seminal book in your field, fewer articles). Due, morning Dec. 16. Annotated bibliography (working title of historiographical review, 8-10 works fully cited, with one sentence of why the article will be useful, and with a brief phrase of approach represented for each; don't use keywords words in titles to explain articles, 2 pp., 5% or half quiz grade), due Oct. 22 (email attachment).